Mike Breitbach Files to Run in Senate District 28

Businessman, public servant and community leader pledges to run grassroots campaign focused on putting more Northeast Iowans back to work

STRAWBERRY POINT – Mike Breitbach, a Strawberry Point businessman, public servant and community leader, officially filed his paperwork and nomination petitions with Iowa Secretary of State Matt Schultz this week. Breitbach has pledged to run an aggressive grassroots campaign to represent Senate District 28, a seat which includes all Clayton and Allamakee and portions of Winneshiek and Fayette Counties in Northeast Iowa.

A trucking and insurance business owner, Breitbach will combine his extensive business experience with a long record of community involvement to bring about measurable results for the hardworking taxpayers of Iowa, balance the budget without raising taxes and promote a business climate where small business job creation can flourish.

“It is easy to point out the problems in our government,” said Breitbach. “However, what we really need are leaders in office who can pinpoint those problems and, more importantly, find the solutions. I have a proven record of solving problems in business and I want to bring that approach to state government,” said Breitbach.

Breitbach is married to his wife Theresa for 34 years. She is a registered nurse at Covenant Medical Center in Waterloo and Oelwein and they have four adult children.
